POETRY.

There is nothing very new, and perhaps nothing remarkably poetical. in the following verses, from the Lynchburg Virginian; but we like this off hand sort of treating with a jyl subject which some people think an excuse for many pages of dull sentiment, and even an apology for the use of the rope

Love-what a curious, comical thing it is, Pleasing and teasing and vexing us so, Just like a bee, with its honey and sting, it is Here, and 'tis there, and wherever we go.

Now it is courting, transporting and thriling us, Nothing in nature can equal our bliss; Now it is frowning, and chilling us, Plunging us down to the lowest abyss.

'Then of a night, how it sets us a dreaming, O!
Misses and kisses flit o'er the brain,
Gay dresses, bright tresses, caresses all seeming so
Real and true that we awaken with pain.

Various aspects and manners it wears,
The pretty and witty, the solemn and quizzical,
All have their part of its pleasures and cares.

When a mere boy, say some five or six years ago, One rogaish girl played the mischief with me, What with her smiling, beguiling, and tears you know, Soon was I pitiful object to see.

O how delightful and frightful! to walk with her Down to the church that stood towering hard by, And then while I tarried unable to talk to her, Eying and sighing and dying was I.

Then what a quarrel, I tremble to think of it; Little was left me of life and of hope,
If not in despair, I was just on the brink of it,
Often I thought of a razor or rope.

Ghost-like, I wandered, for weeks, by a lonely brook, Shaded by Woods, from society free;
Theu, first on earth, my glazed eyeballs would only look
Up, where my head struck the lamb of a tree.

Parents and kindred cried, what is the matter dear? Duly and truly your feelings impart.

Ah me! I replied, with a groan, such a clatter here!

Putting my hand where I once had a heart!

Well, sure enough, it was tough, but I bore it all; Years of adventure have since passed away, But yet, in good truth, I have hardly got over it all; Queer I appear, as the most of folks say.

Pardon my folly, kind gentlemen editors, Thus to be whining and rhyming about
What (publish it; then you'll be greatly my creditors,)
Scarcely we live with, and can't live without,

We present our readers with another beautiful effusion from our valued correspondent.

A THIRD SONNET .- By Ashley Royce.

Oh that the desert were my dwelling-place With one fair spirit for my minister !- Childe Harold.

She leaned upon her harp—the gentle maid ! Her lily hands fell drooping o'er the strings, And on her pearly neck the bright hair laid In rich luxuriance, as when Morning flings Her golden wreaths upon a mount of snow;

While from her lips the soft delicious flow Of breathing incense told how pure and deen The joys that nestled there. Like the sweet rays Or moonlight on a wave, she seemed to sleep!

I took one long entrancing, burning gaze, Thinking, if I could paint, how rich a glow That form, like Hebe's, on the world should throw.

I pressed one kiss upon that polished brow-Zounds ! what a box !-my ears are ringing now !

The Lion Theatre .- The curiosity excited by the extensive preparations for the opening of this establish- Washington street. ment will soon be gratified. The recent warm weather has enabled the numerous workmen employed upon the building to go forward with redoubled energy. The interior begins to assume a certain symmetry, and the spectator can now form an idea of the probable beauty of the whole when completed. It is gratifying to learn that the managers and proprietors of the new theatre sion of some new performer. Athletæ and equestrians, tragedians and comedians—all the varied corps of an establishment of this sort, are ready to display their powers on the opening night. Then shall we see at least one rider possessing the daring and grace of the amphitheatrical Ducrow—and more than one courser of the pure nobility of the eastern desert, stainless in pedigree and fleet as the fiery Simoom of Arabia. We will say no more at present, except that we anticipate an overflowing house at the opening—for all the world will be there—Lions, Tigers and all.

Mathews, Carpue, and R——.—Dr Carpue had long since given it as his opinion that Mathews had experienced improper treatment at the time of his accident, and that had he been in judicious hands he would not have been lame. Some one speaking on this subhave not been idle. Every day we hear of the acces-not have been lame. Some one speaking on this subject to R -, said, "I understand Mathews means to leave his broken leg to Carpue when he dies."-"The devil he does!" said R --; "well, for my part, I should be sorry to have such a leg-as-he (legacy.)"

Matthews and Theodore Hook .- "No one ever fitted me dramatically like Hook: he knew every note of my gamut, but then he and I had been intimate associates; and, moreover, Theodore was a musician and a mimic, and would have been (had he chosen) an admirable comedian: he knew enough of the histronic art to knew exactly what material a comic actor wanted from which to work out his effects."

Tom Sheridan's filial Duty.-Miles Andrews one signed Arnold Boyden. day meeting Tom Sheridan, expressed his surprise at seeing him out; after a good deal of astonishment on both sides, Andrews cried out, "Is it possible you do not know that your father is no more?" (Such a report had that day been current in the city.) "Why," replied Tom, "I left him half an hour ago, and he said he was very well; but he is such a cursed liar, there's no believing a word he says, and therefore, notwithstanding his assertion, it's very likely to be as you say." Incledon and Pope (the Tragedian) on American Manners .- Pope's love of the good things of this life was unbounded; amid many other sayings, one of his was to the effect that he knew of but one crime that man could commit, and that was peppering a ramp steak. When Incledon returned from America he met his old friend Pope, and after mutual congratula tions, the latter exclaimed, "Well, Charles, and how do they feed ?" "Immortally," replied Charles,-"the very poetry of eating and drinking, my dear Pope, in all things but one; by—they take no oil to their salads." "No oil to their salads!" reiterated the horror-stricked tragedian, " why did we make peace with them !"

or single bottle, of A. BOYDEN, Hancock-st.

As in all cases, so especially in this, Venders, if they wish to secure the patronage of the public, should be extremely caustions not to sell an article for the H.

As in all cases, so especially in this, should be extremely cautious not to sell an article for the Hair which tends to counter act rather than assist nature,

The virtues of Bear's Oil have been too long tested to need ary eulogium; and at this time no one can doubt of its being the very best article for strengthening and promoting the growth of the Hair. An honest prejudice against the use of Bear's Oil has long existed, arising from two causes—the improper method of purifying it, and the imposition upon the public of a spurious article. That this prejudice may be wholly removed, this article now offered is warranted the pure Oil, rendered more pleasant by the addition of a little perfume—and the possibility of its injuring the Hair is entirely precluded by the manner in which it has been purified. To prevent fraud, the genuine is enclosed in two wrappers, the inside one being signed Arnold Boyden.

PERSONS AFFLICTED WITH

Corns!

VILL find in the use of the ALBION CORN PLASTER one of the most efficacious remedies known for that troublesome complaint, as hundreds or thousands can, and are ready to testify to its having answered a better purpose than any thing they had ever used. This application never causes the least pain, aithough it softens the corn, and draws it out by the roots. It gives immediate case as soon as applied, and is as thorough as it is gentle in itseffects.

REMARKABLE CURES!

A gentleman near Greenfield writes—"It has cured a Corn which for four years had caused me inconceivable pain and trouble, (after trying various other remedies;) and having received such relief myself, I advise all, however obstinate the complaint, to make trial of the Albion Corn Plaster, and I have no doubt they will soon be as ready to express their gratitude as I am."

The subscriber is also determined that nothing shall be wanting through every department of his Infirmary as to neatness and regularity, good order, the best of nursing and attention, to make every one who lavers him with their patronage happy and contented. He has also a valuable library of the best selected books for the instruction and amosement of his patients. He has also in readiness clean changes of linen for all patients who come to take single courses of medicine, and India Rubber coverings for the mattrasses and beds he always uses to prevent contagion. His steam boxes have windows with curtains, so that patients who are feeble can at any time put out their heads and breathe fresh air. The boilers are so constructed that he can at any moment graduate the steam to suit their wish or ability to bear, so that there is not the least danger to the most feeble constitution, not even for an infant of a month old. The shower of two quarts of cold water is delicious, though we never insist on it, as it is always a matter of choice with the patients, and a person who has once taken it will never after be denied, but will frequently call for more. AMOS KENDALL. Since the adoption of the Federal Constitution, no man has appeared as a public officer, who has been so much abused, and whose character is so imperfectly understood, as the subject of this notice. The writer of this is no politician-that is, he takes no active part in the politics of the day, except what is the privilege of every citizen, quietly voting on the days of election; but is willing "to speak that which he does know, and to testify to that which he has seen."

While a member of Dartmouth College, (which, by the way, has produced more distinguished men, in proportion to the number of its graduates, than any other seminary in the Union,) more than twenty years ago, I was acquainted with Mr Kendall. He was commencing his third year when I was admitted-he therefore remained two years in college while I was a member. The difference in our ages, I being quite a youth at that time, and rank, prevented me from aspiring to an acquaintance with him, and rendered me almost unknown to him ; but his reputation, the respect paid to bim for his talents and moral character, early attracted my attention. Mr K. was considered the first scholar in college, and when he received his degree, he had the first appointment in his class. It was not in the sciences only that he was distinguished, he acquired a high degree of reputation as a belles lettres scholar. It was a custom then to close the exercises of commencement evening with a theatrical exhibition, and Mr Kendall was chosen by the scholars to write a tragedy, which was performed with remarkable success. The language of some parts of this play would not suffer in comparison with Shakspeare's best productions.

All that Mr K. then possessed to recommend him to notice, was his moral character and scholarship. He had none of the blandishments of polished life, no "suaviter in modo," no refinement in manners, no management nor policy which he has since been accused of possessing to such an extent. On the contrary, his demeanor was grave and schelar-like, his manners rather forbidding than attractive-in short, he had none of those qualities which make men shine, and which stand in place of the sterner virtues. I speak of him as he was twenty years ago -for I have seen him but once since, and that was about two years ago, when he appeared to me as possessing the same simplicity of character which I had seen in former days-and, in fact, he appeared the same man, though somewhat worn by time, care and toil. In college, Mr K. was not the scholar called "popular;" for he had but few of the requisites to make him so; but during the two last years of his college life that I witnessed, I never heard a word reflecting upon his character as a highminded, honest and honorable man. As a man and a scholar, Mr Kendall was esteemed and respected, but the companionable qualities, which often render men acceptable in the social circle, and which stand in the place of real merit, he did not then possess.

How much power of address, what captivating qualities, what insinuating manners he may have since acquired, the writer of this has yet to learn; but if Mr K. has become an intriguing, managing, artful politician, he has entirely changed his character, not only in the opinion of the writer, but in the opinion of every one with whom the writer is acquainted, and who has had the same opportunities to form an opinion of his character.

I have met with many college-mates since Mr Kendall has taken so prominent a part in the government of our country, and have never found one who did not express much surprise at the opprobium . heaped upon his name. It is remarkable that among all my acquaintance, who personally know Mr Kendall, and who are opposed to him in politics, I have never found one who did not coincide with me in opinion, that Mr K. was a first-rate man, possessing talents, learning, honesty and worth, that qualify him for any station in the gift of his fellow-citizens. It was during the administration of Madison when the writer and Mr Kendall were in college; and to be a Democrat was as unpopular in college then, as it now is to be a Jackson man in Boston. Mr Kendall was a Democrat in those days, and the writer distinctly remembers that he used to unite with the few of that party in college in celebrating the Fourth of July at Norwich, a village in Vermont, on the side of the river opposite to Dartmouth College This circumstance is mentioned, to show that Mr Kendall has been consistent in his politics; and that no part of the reputation he enjoyed was obtained from his political opinions -opinions which he did not attempt to conceal, and which did not obtain for him any great share of affection among the officers of the college, nor enable him to number among his friends a majority of

The officers of the college were, however, just men; they could not withhold from Mr Kendall what was his due; and they conferred upon him the highest honors they could bestow. The scholars duly appreciated his merits, and expressed their approbation by choosing him for their dramatic poet to close the performances of the commencement exhibition.

Mr Kendall, while acquiring a collegiate education, like many of the enterprising students of New England, supported himself principally by his own exertions, and when he left his "Alma-mater," he was poor in purse, but rich in talents, in literary acquirements, and moral rectitude. He was graduated in 1811, and after that time I never heard anything respecting him until his

Soon after entering upon the duties of his office, his searching eye detected a defalcation of his predecessor, which led to the punishment and disgrace of the offender. After faithfully performing the duties of Fourth Auditor for several years, he has been promoted to the important station of Postmaster General-and I hazard nothing in saying that he will prove to be the most efficient officer which that department has ever had to preside over it. A stranger to his character must form a high opinion of the peculiar adaptation of his talents to the duties of the office, from the fruits of his labors already exhibited. He has extricated the department from the embarrassments under which it labored -embarrassments caused by a fault, which many honest men have, of placing too much confidence in others delicate versifiers that ever put pen to paper.

and trusting to agents what they ought to manage them-

Mr Kendall possesses a vigilance that never slumbers; all who serve under him must do their duty, and do it faithfully. Decision, promptness and punctuality are feets merely confined to the guilty agent, as a most indispensable in such an office, and these requisites Mr K. possesses in an eminent degree.

Now, Mr Editor, let me ask, what has raised Amos Kendall to his present elevated station? We have seen him set out in life, with nothing but talents, learning, and moral worth, to depend upon ; destitute of elegant external accomplishments, a winning address and fascinating manners, which so often are received as substitutes for real merit, and enable men to recommend themselves to the notice of many admirers; and without family influence or any extraneous aid, we have offices in the gift of his country. Considering his char- of $120, and warrants issued against the O'Briens, the very circumstance of his having risen to his present station prove that he possesses the talents requisite thereof. Messrs Richardson & Stratton, are both so well known to the Boston public, as teachers of Penmanship, and have taught that art with so much success in this city, that it will perhaps be unnecessary to say any thing further of their system of instruction, the merits of which are so universally acknowledged. For the information, however, of persons who reside at a distance, and may be desirous of being taught the above branches, they beg leave to add, that the system is simple and fingers which is so embarrassing, and which other professors have heretofore almost entirely failed to accomplish.

In the department of Book-KEEPING.

In the department of Book-Keeping, Messrs. R. & S. have had much personal experience, and have also derived valuable information from several eminent merchants of this city, which enables them to combine the elementary instructions of the master, with the practical improvements of the merchant. They propose to initiate young gentlemen, who are about entering upon Commercial Business, not to teach merchants. They do not pretend to have made any new inventions or discoveries, but will, in all cases follow the most approved precedents of mercantile experience, and give their pupils such practice, as will enable them, when they arrive at the Country house, the research to the control of the contro ounting house, to transact business with precision and Terms in the above branches may be known by application at their room.

A MERICAN PULMONARY BALSAM.-The A Safest and most certain Remedy for Consumption, Asthma, Pleurisy, Spitting of Blood, Whooping Cough, Influenza, Coughs and Colds, and all Pulmonary Diseases.

This Medicine was originally the private recipe of a distinguished Physician, in whose practice it was used with the most decided success. .

CERTIFICATE. This certifies that my daughter has for a long time been troubled with a bad cough, pains in her side, under the shoulder blade, and in her head; she was unable to eat any kind of food without it producing severe pains in her stomach; her sleep was very restless, attended with slight sweats, and in fact she had all the most aggravated symptoms of consumption.— Frequent journeys into the country had been tried without producing any effect. She was at last recommended to try the American Polmonary Balsam, by her physician, as it had been known to afford great relief in such cases, and to our great surprise she was in a short time totally relieved from all the above symptoms. I can therefore cordially recommend to every one afficied with any affection of the lungs or stomach, to try this medicine, as in my opinion, it will much more than realize their expectations.

(Signed) Boston, Sept. 16, 1833. WM. W. MOTLEY. Directions for using, and several other certificates from highly respectable individuals accompanying each bottle.

Purchasers should be particular to get the American Pulnonary Balsam, as there are some other kinds for sale of a justice result. similar name.

ADAMS'S PATENT SWELLED

Swelled Beam Windlass Bedsteads, which, for comfort and convenience is undoubtedly the best article yet invented; its chief peculiarity is that of the Swelled Beam, the effect of which is to produce a crowning, and elastic sacking, and effectually provides against its saging. They are easily set up or taken down, and may be saved in case of fire as easily as any other piece or furniture, and from its mode of construction less liable to harbor insects than any other kind; but above all its advantages is the ease and comfort obtained from the sacking, by means of its being made and kept elastic by means of the Swelled Beam, (the form of which is exhibited in the above cut.)
